Investment Process

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by benchmarks. Stock selection is driven by a firm understanding of an individual company's underlying business fundamentals and how they relate to an ever-changing world. It is important to consider the interplay of monetary and fiscal policies around the world and how significant changes in these policies may affect equity markets. High conviction ideas are generated by a combination of internal and external research and quantitative and technical analysis. Owning equities and investing in the stock market allows an investor to participate in the future growth of the world. A diversified and liquid portfolio of equities will benefit in an ever-changing and growing world economy, where innovation and technological advances continue to drive new investment opportunities. One of our objectives is to identify future trends and themes using our internal analytical capability and to find ways to allow the Dynamic Portfolio to participate.

Market Commentary

The pain of October's month end sell-off faded rapidly as equity and bond markets rallied in the aftermath of the Trump election victory. Only Europe and Japan had negative equity market performance. In Japan, this was driven by the unexpected general election that was called and the weak coalition government that followed. In Europe, market weakness stemmed from the abrupt announcement of a general election in Germany scheduled for next February, coupled with fears of tariffs being imposed on European exports by the incoming Trump administration in 2025.

US equity markets reacted enthusiastically to Trump's election, buoyed by optimism that Republican control of both the House of Representatives and the Senate would allow Trump's economic plans to be quickly enacted.

Beyond the impact of Trump, the broader investment environment remains positive. In November, both the US Federal Reserve and the Bank of England lowered rates, suggesting that monetary policy remained tight and further cuts were possible if inflation continues to moderate. Similarly, the European Central Bank has signalled its intention to reduce interest rates further.

Global economic growth remains positive, energy prices continue to decline and labour markets remain tight – a combination that supports continued positive performance in risk assets.

After a challenging few months, fixed income generated positive returns. Comments from President-elect Trump's economic team suggested the new administration would not necessarily make the budget deficit larger which encouraged a decline in longer term yields. Meanwhile, economic weakness in Germany pushed European yields lower and favourable, inflation data allowed UK yields to retreat from recent highs.

We remain positive on the investment outlook but anticipate greater volatility due to President-elect Trump's unpredictable leadership style. In response, we have added exposure to US small cap stocks and increased our holdings in US financials, two areas poised to benefit from lower taxes and regulatory reforms.
